

Depth Course 5: Setting Fire to Your Meditation, Part II
Reading Two: An Unchanging Cause?

O You of Great Intellect, it is like this: to imagine or believe that a thing such as empty space, or cessations, or passing beyond grief is a working thing which was not produced by anything is to attach an essence to a thing that does not exist.